Please, may I introduce myself to you? I am called Wisdom, the one you should look for, the one great philosophers are tireless writing about, the one Buddha, Jesus and Mohamed proclaim in their teachings. You should desire to be my acquaintance. You should treasure me like a seldom pearl or a rare stamp. You should look for me like you would search for the last coin in your pocket you know should be there.

You have never heard of me? Nobody cared to tell you about my existence at all? Let me tell you something: It is not that hard to find me and become my friend. I sound my voice eternally to everybody who cares to listen, who is eager to be taught vital life lessons, who wants to discover the truth in everything, who wants to shed his foolish behavior and wants to find happiness not just for himself but for everybody in the world.

I don't hide. I can't be hidden. Nobody can obscure me.

I am constantly sounding my voice.

Step out of your house, step out of your solitary, step out of your prison, step into the sun, be seen for who you are and listen carefully to my voice. For my voice can only be heard when you meet other people, when you walk the world's streets, when you engage in talking and reading. Enjoy your time, enjoy what I have to say. Don't be shy! When you engage yourself in conversation with weird and strange people you also will hear my voice. When you walk the streets, when you mingle with the crowd you will hear my voice in every scene that unfolds around you. Be observant and listen carefully because then you will have no problem hearing the sound of my voice.

Whenever you go to see a movie my voice is clearly audible. When you sit down and watch a soap opera, listen carefully because even there I sound my voice.

When literary people sit down and bring words to paper for whatever purpose, I guide their thoughts through their research and consideration. With their words they also record what I have to tell.

No matter if it is a novel of any kind, a short story, poetry or serious nonfiction: I am there and inspire the genuine writer who researches well and has only good in mind. Yes, then my voice is preserved even in writing.

My voice can be heard wherever a good story is been told, performed on stage or filmed to be shown on the big screen in a cinema or on the small screen of a television set. My words travel through all the gossip and fairy-tales, true stories and fantasy novels. There are so many ways at my disposal to make my voice heard wherever it is needed. I have no face, nor a bodily appearance. I can’t be traced by forensics nor seen by eyewitnesses. Scientists will not be able to extract me from their theories nor will they be able to prove my existence otherwise.

In fact nobody is aware that my voice travels with their help. There is no awareness of me when I travel through the world.

Though the knowledge about me and my doings is as valuable as finding a treasure, nobody cares to draw up a map to find me.

Knowing about me and the usefulness of my teachings are more powerful than any military force and government in the world, though I am not a queen, not a president, not a prime minister, not a dictator or tyrant. I do not govern a country that can be invaded or suppressed. I survive famines, pandemics, wars and economic depressions. I can’t be killed or be murdered. I am here forever, unstoppable and unbeatable.

I am fathomable to everybody who is consciously aware of my existence.

I belong to no God and to no religion. I can’t be taken hostage, though some people try to do so.

Siddhartha Gautama listened to my voice and took in everything I said. With my help he became Buddha.

I met Jesus. We had a heart to heart many times on his journeys, he absorbed every word my voice brought to his attention. He then never stopped lending me his voice when he taught in public.

I traveled with Mohamed through the Arab world. In quiet moments I taught him everything I knew.

I taught so many people that I can hardly keep track of every soul that sought my help. But in relation to the number of fools and ignorants walking on the face of the earth they are few.

Don’t be shy. Everybody can listen to my voice. No hard training is needed, even the uneducated is able to hear me.

I speak all languages that exist and existed in this world. I know no border, nor do I care for race, skin color or ethnicity. A can’t be owned by a group or a person alone. I am everywhere where people interact with one another.

My voice travels via e-mail over the Internet. My voice is preserved on websites in many designs. Read a magazine or a daily newspaper and you can hear me telling stories that enriches your knowledge.

Many people seem not to care to listen to my voice. They turn to false prophets who only satisfy with their teachings their own greed. Religious morals and rites in churches, temples and mosques muffle my sound. Most religious sermons teach foolish things. No, I can't be found in distorted and fabricated truths. I find it hard to raise my voice in theological doctrines and theological discourses and in violent acts.

Don't pray to me that I will come upon you because I am not God. Don't make sacrifices for me and don't perform any rites to make me do things. Don't celebrate any liturgy on my behalf. Don't try to mold any material to symbolize me, because no symbol is able to represent my nature.

My voice is there every day of your life. My voice can be heard in any kind of weather, in tragedy, in comedy, in happy times and sad times and also in leisurely activities, in soap operas, murder mysteries and fictitious dramas, even in chick-lit novels. My voice is audible in everything that tells from experience and is in everything that was recovered through proper research. My voice sound in discussions, debates and in arguments. My voice can be heard when you meet strangers on the road and I travel with you when you move on to new pastures and cultures.

I am a good teacher. I give you decent advice on everything you want to know. I put everything in perspective so you will get a bigger picture. Whatever I teach you, it is the truth and it is worthwhile to know.

If you really want me as teacher then you have to grow the desire to hear my voice. You need to set your mind to it. You need to do more than just to hear other people talking or to read the daily newspaper or to go to the movies or to watch a soap opera. To gain anything from hearing my voice you have to engage yourself with the sound of my voice for a long time, for my lessons are progressive. I won't give you deep understanding over night, nor will it happen on the spot or instantly after listening to me. The fruits of listening to my lessons will ripen in you gradually over a period of time.

Siddhartha Gautama, for example, had a fundamental question he wanted to have answered. He left his customary environment and went on a quest to find true happiness. On this quest he discovered my voice and he listened to me. I led him step by step to the right conclusions, one after another, by teaching him about the important things in life and how they related to each other. Eventually his questions were all answered while he sat under the Bodhi-Tree.

And you too can listen to my voice. It is as simple as reading a book or listening to a story. You have to set your mind to it. My voice is not that of a man. No, my voice can only be heard after a story is finished, when the point is made. My voice helps to make sense of what you have just seen, heard or read. Often it means to realize where you are wrong.

When you listen to my voice I teach you what there is to know about life, about nature, about human beings, about humor, about preventing pain and about the nature of God. When you listen carefully and with awareness to my voice everything falls into its place, everything gets into perspective and the picture becomes gradually clearer. Then comprehension kicks in and the realization of knowing the truth.

I can only teach you when you try to listen carefully all the time. My wisdom builds up gradually analog to the progress of your experiences in life. Think about what you heard and what you have read and my voice will help you to process the information so that every experience gets its rightful meaning. I can't prevent painful life experiences, but I can help you to draw the right conclusions so that you won't repeat the same mistakes. I can help you to make the right choices. I can point to you all the opportunities that arise. I will help you to excel in your talents and I can help you to overcome your weaknesses.

My voice makes you wise and independent from other people. Nobody can take from you what I taught you about life. Give me your time and you learn about the nature of God as well. You'll see, in the end everything becomes clear.

When you become truly wise, people will adore you for your sensibility, wit and sensitivity, your honesty and your stand in life.

Tell your friends how simple it is to become my friend, teach your kids to become inquisitive and therefore be able to hear my voice at the earliest moment possible.

When you meet total strangers and weird people, listen to them, because I love the weird, the eccentric and the oddballs in the world. With them I can correct you when you are about to become foolish and ignorant again.

I hope to hear from you soon.
